THE SENTINEL.

Monday, January 21, 1867.

Impeachment—Exciting Statements.

The New York Herald, of Thursday, says:

No preordained event in human affairs is more certain to come to pass than the impeachment and removal of President Johnson from office. This thing will be done because it has become a necessity to the consummation of this revolution. Congress has no alternative when the suspension of its authority over the rebel States for two years yet to come is morally certain under President Johnson.

It says the present House will impeach. The Senate, after March 4th, will elect Fessenden as presiding officer—will then arraign and suspend the President, and Fessenden is at once to take his place. Before May, Johnson will be convicted, and Grant and Farragut chosen by a special election to fill out his term.

The New York World, of the same date, says:

The prospects of the country have never, even during the darkest periods of the war, seemed so alarming as at present. From well-informed sources in Washington we receive intelligence which confirms our opinion that the Radicals are strenuously bent on impeachment; and the result can be nothing less than a hideous civil war in which men will be eager to cut the throats of their nearest neighbors. It will be no such war as that from which we have emerged, in which the combatants were separated by geographical lines. There is no part of the country in which multitudes of the best citizens do not consider the cause of the President as that of the Constitution. If an attempt is made to depose him upon mere partisan grounds, they will conclude that the supremacy of the Constitution may as well be vindicated, once for all, and will accept the risks and perils of maintaining it.

Per contra—Forney's paper contains the following correspondence:

The arguments against impeachment are strongly urged even in loyal circles. Among them is one that if Johnson should be removed an election for President must take place in November of this year, which of course must be followed by another in November of 1868.—The general opinion is that the Committee on the Judiciary will make up a tremendous indictment against him, and that Congress will simultaneously strip him of all power for harm, and then permit him to serve out his term.

The agent of the Tribune's Boston "bureau" communicates to that journal the following frightful statistics in relation to flogging in Massachusetts:

Mr. George B. Emerson has been calling attention to some of the detective methods of education in the Boston schools, and Dr. Ordway, who is said to have a "hobby," and, therefore, like all men who have hobbies, a sort of red spectre to fogies and routinists, has made public some statistics in relation to flogging, or, to speak more mildly, corporeal punishment in these same institutions. The Doctor states on authority of the record kept by the teachers, that there have been thirteen thousand cases of this sort of discipline in nine months.

Thirteen thousand floggings in nine months! The "Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin," which covers all the "outrages" of this kind for a period of thirty years in the South, does not reveal a tithe of such instances in the whole slave record of the old slave States. If the Bureau has a particle of the protective powers that are claimed for it, surely the white boys and girls of Massachusetts should have the benefit of the Bureau at once, and Senator Sumner should give the Senate a two days' speech on the "Barbarism of Civilization in Massachusetts."—N. Y. World.

ATLANTIC & N. C. RAILROAD.—This road is now doing an unusually brisk business in both passenger and freight traffic, notwithstanding the general dullness of the times. On Thursday their down freight was heavy, whilst we noticed that the company's warehouse was full of up freight waiting for the up train Friday morning. Freight was received up to 9 o'clock, on Thursday night, and on yesterday morning the warehouse had been cleared of its last package, twenty cars having been loaded chiefly during the night. There is great energy at the Newbern depot. Maj. W. H. Harvey, Supt. of Transportation, Col. J. V. Jordan, General Agent, and Capt. H. Lane, Assistant, never think of closing their labors while there is freight to dispatch. They were up the entire night of Thursday getting off this freight, and this is no unusual thing. The services of these faithful officers are well worthy of recognition. —Newbern Commercial.

HOW TO PROPOSE.—A party of ladies and gentlemen were laughing over the supposed awkwardness attending a declaration of love, when a gentleman remarked, that if ever he offered himself he would do it in a business-like manner. "For instance," he continued, addressing a lady present, "Miss Smith, I have been two years looking for a wife; I am in receipt of about three hundred a year, which is on the increase. Of all the ladies of my acquaintance, I admire you the most; indeed, I love you, and would gladly make you my wife." "You flatter me by your preference," good humoredly replied Miss Smith, to the surprise of all present; "I refer you to my father." "Bravo," exclaimed the gentlemen. "Well, I declare!" said the ladies in a chorus. The lady and gentleman, good reader, were married soon after. Wasn't that a modest way of "coming to the point," and a lady-like method of taking a man at his word?

DEATH OF CAPTAIN GEORGE B. ATKINS.—We regret to announce the death of Capt. G. B. Atkins, who breathed his last at his residence on Walnut street, in this city, on yesterday morning.

Capt. Atkins was a native of Fayetteville, in which place he resided till the beginning of the war, when he entered the service of the Confederate States, in which he remained, until the surrender of Gen. Johnston.

He was the last commanding officer of the celebrated "Starr's Light Battery," in which position he exhibited high qualities as a soldier and distinguished ability as an officer.

Since the war he has resided in this city, during which time he had made troops of friends who will lament his unexpected death.—Wil. Dispatch.

Having been appointed agent for the above Company, I respectfully call the attention of the citizens of this section of North Carolina, to the fact that this is a Southern Company with an authorized Capital of $500,000. THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, SEATON GALES. Editors.

Monday Evening, Jan. 21, 1867.

Voices from the Past.

The dominant party in Congress, and at the North, in their mad schemes and revolutionary designs, are utterly heedless of the lessons of the past and insensible to all the teachings of history. It was said of the old Bourbons of France, that they "never learned and never forgot anything." An intenser fatuity seems to characterize the Radicals of the present day.—They seem incapable of forgetting the prejudices which were begotten of war, and altogether deaf to the experience which speaks in the warning voice of other times and other people.

The misfortune is that, in the pride of power and place, they seem to regard themselves as a class of Reformers, to whom history affords no parallel, and whose lessons and precedents, therefore, are inapplicable to themselves. And they not only arrogate to themselves this haughty pretension, but they hug the idea that the "model Republic" and the nineteenth century, in enlightenment and progress, are something entirely different from any former age and country, unmarked by any of the characteristics, and unaffected by any of the considerations, which distinguished other days and other people. Never was there a more fatal error. Human nature, as it exhibits itself in individual character or in political society, is the same in all ages.

We presume that no "statesman" of modern days will compare, in political sagacity or in grasp of intellect, with Edmund Burke,—not even, perhaps, Mr. Thaddeus Stevens. In discussing the conduct of the Irish people under the oppressive and proscriptive treatment of England, that great and discerning man said: "After people have taken your tests prescribed by yourselves, as proofs of their allegiance, to be marked as enemies, traitors, or, at least, suspected and dangerous persons, who are not to be believed on their oaths, we should not be surprised if they fall into a passion, or talk, sometimes, as men in a passion do, intemperately and idly." Even this, however, cannot be said of the Southern people, except in few isolated and insignificant instances. With an uncomplaining submission, manly dignity, and patient forbearance of murmur, they have succumbed to the severest conditions and exactions,—greater, by far, than any that have been imposed upon the people of Ireland, who, at least, are granted representation in Parliament.

Alluding to the same subject, (and it may be remarked that the case of Ireland is the most apposite to our own condition, as it affords the most recent example of the impolicy and wickedness of a vindictive and oppressive national policy,) Lord Eldon remarked, in the House of Lords, in the year 1811: "Penal laws are a delusive defence, planned by ignorance, founded on injustice, reared by the unhallowed hand of tyranny, and continued by folly. No bulwarks can be equal to the affection and loyalty of a free people." * * * "Their destiny (the Catholic Irish) will then be inseparably connected with that of their country, and they will be sensible that it is their duty, as well as their interest, to maintain a constitution, by the justice of which they enjoy their rights, and to the stability of which they must look for their protection." A contrary policy from that indicated in these words of wisdom has produced its legitimate fruits of alienation, distrust, enmity and frequent attempts at revolt. The same causes will always produce similar effects.

A writer in the Edinburg Review of January 1825, which lies before us, discussed this whole question in so masterly a style that we cannot forego making the following extracts. They need no comment. They are words of wisdom —momentous words. We would that the lesson they teach might be heeded.

"Is there any man so blind and bigoted, so stupidly attached to antiquated prejudices and errors, as to continue to lend his support to a system productive of such baleful results? Is not the experience of four centuries sufficient to convice the people and Parliament of England, that it is not by mere brute force, by penal laws and insurrection acts, that the peace of Ireland is to be secured, and the foundations of her prosperity laid? The period has at last arrived, when it is certain that measures of a decisive character must be adopted with respect to Ireland; and we are bold to say, that the integrity, and, for that reason, the fate, of the British empire, depends on the nature of these measures. If we act on sound and liberal principles, it is not yet too late to repair the faults and follies of which we have been guilty, and to make Ireland our best bulwark. * * *

"Have the people of England to be told that peace and kindly affections do not spring from exclusion and the sword? If we are really desirous of attaching the people of Ireland to the government of England, we must render that government advantageous to them. The peasantry must know, and they must feel, that they are protected by the law, that they have a stake in the hedge, and that every avenue to power and emolument is open to their ambition. If you act thus, you may still attach them to your interest; if you do not, you will alienate them still more. The existing breach between the two countries will be gradually widened, and our ascendency will depend entirely on the number of our bayonets.

But even this resource, miserable and humiliating as it is, is one on which no certain reliance can be placed. The whole disposable revenue of Great Britain will most probably be found insufficient for the maintenance of an army capable of retaining a population of six or seven millions, who have every thing to gain, and nothing to lose, by revolution, in a state of unwilling subjection. * * *

"And are not these things enough to give us pause? Are they not enough to make even bigots abashed and ashamed!—and to stimulate the wise and good of all parties and denominations, to lay aside their petty differences, and to co-operate for the adoption of measures calculated to guard against such tremendous consequences! Let no one suppose that the questions respecting Ireland, that must necessarily be discussed in the ensuing session, affect that country only. * * *

"It is no exaggeration to affirm, that the destinies of the whole empire hang on these discussions. Ireland cannot sink into the abyss of poverty and degradation, without dragging Great Britain after her—Justice to Ireland is in fact justice to ourselves; and cannot be denied, without entailing equally ruinous consequences on the oppressor as on the victim." * *

"There is at this moment no such thing as a real union between England and Ireland. The arrangement so designated, is purely nominal; it rests on no solid or substantial basis; the two nations are not bound together by the strong and powerful ties of mutual interest and reciprocal obligation. Ireland regards England as her oppressor, and not as her protector and ally. But if the miserable remnant of the penal code were abolished—new interests and new feelings would arise. The recollection of past sufferings and persecutions would gradually be obliterated; good will and confidence between the different parties in Ireland, and between England and Ireland, would begin to grow up; and the ground would thus be cleared for the adoption of those other measures that are indispensably necessary for raising the peasantry from their present state of poverty and destitution."

Is North Carolina a State?

The history of the late Provisional Governor of North Carolina, if ever written fairly, would characterize him as one of the most changeful, unsettled, unreliable men of any age; but, in all his changes, a veritable Vicar of Bray.

No man in North Carolina has been a more blatant advocate of the rights and indestructibility of the States than he, none more violent in the assertion of those rights, yet, since his conversion to Radicalism, he gulps down, without an effort, the most radical vagaries of consolidation. He is now ready to admit that North Carolina is not a State, but a conquered territory, deserving disfranchisement, if not annihilation. The causes for this change of sentiment cannot be traced to any force of argument stronger than that which always held the Vicar of Bray to his gleba.

A little over a year ago, Mr. Holden, then Provisional Governor, addressed a message to the State Convention, then assembled in this City, the second paragraph of which reads as follows:

"North Carolina attempted, in May 1861, to separate herself from the Federal Union. This attempt involved her, with other slaveholding States, in a protracted and disastrous war, the result of which was a vast expenditure of blood and treasure on her part, and the practical abolition of domestic slavery. She entered the rebellion a slaveholding State, and she emerged from it a non-slaveholding State. In other respects, so far as her existence as a State and her rights as a State are concerned, she has undergone no change. The President of the United States wisely determined that ther existence as a State should not be extinguished, but that, under the clause of the Federal Constitution which "guarantees to every State in the Union a republican form of government," her people, in Convention assembled, might so alter and amend their Constitution, and adopt such measures as would restore the State to her Constitutional relations to the Federal Government, and thus secure once more to the people thereof the immeasurable benefits and blessings of the Union."

The above was sound doctrine Oct. 3rd. 1865. We considerer it sound doctrine now. Can Mr. Holden, or any one else, show to the contrary?

The Situation.

The movements of the dominant party in Congress, and the results of their action, continue to be matters of speculation with letter-writers and others. What they will determine upon, is yet unknown to mortals. The disposition of the Southern States to remain in statu quo, to rest upon their oars and let events come, as well as the firmness of the President and of the Supreme Court, in some sort require a change of programme. Hence, it is difficult to say what will be done.

The temper of several of the leaders of the party indicates a purpose to impeach the President at all hazards; this being effected, of course there will be no longer any serious barrier, to the overthrow of every impediment which lies in the way of a thorough revolution of the government. We cannot bring ourselves to the belief that the North will sustain this extraordinary and destructive policy. We still hope that more prudent and safe counsels may prevail.

The able and forcible article which we publish, in another column, from the New York World, contains much food for reflection. It will be observed that it takes a more serious view of the impeachment movement than it has heretofore given the matter, and sounds the key-note of warning and alarm. We commend the article to the attentive perusal of our readers.

Governor Orr upon Territoralizing the South.

WASHINGTON, January 17.—Governor Orr, of South Carolina; Bedford Brown, of North Carolina, with a large number of visitors, were at the White House to-day. Governor Orr is on business connected with emigration to South Carolina, and the relief of the former postmasters there who turned over their funds to the Confederate Government. He is not in favor of the adoption of the constitutional amendment by any Southern State, but favors a graceful submission to anything the conquerors may demand. He says, jocularly, that territorialization would be welcomed as an economical measure.

Mr. Greeley, in the lecture which he is delivering in various parts of the country, defines anarchy as "the unchecked power of the strongest." We fear this definition will hardly pass muster. It is the definition of despotism, not of anarchy, which is the absence of any supreme power.—Anarchy paves the way to despotism, but is not despotism; anarchy is anarchy.—Louisville Journal.

MURDERER OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.—A letter from Calcutta says that Lieutenant William Martin Holbert, of Shenandoah notoriety, laid a wager there with a Boston gentleman, of $2,500, that Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln, was alive and well, and that he would furnish proof of his averment in six months from the time the wager was laid.

The Hon. Joshua Hill, of Georgia has presented to Congress a claim of several thousand dollars for losses and depredations which he suffered during the war from the Union army.

Governor Orr, of South Carolina, states that a company is being formed with a capital of five millions to build up an immense manufacturing establishment in the State. Better have them smaller and more of them!

[From the New York World.]

Impeachment of the President.

To persons capable of discerning the future in its germs, the prospects of the country have never, even during the darkest periods of the war, seemed so alarming as at present. From well-informed sources in Washington we receive intelligence which confirms our opinion that the Radicals are strenuously bent on impeachment; and the result can be nothing less than a hideous civil war in which men will be eager to cut the throats of their nearest neighbors. It will be no such war as that from which we have emerged, in which the combatants were separated by geographical lines. There is no part of the country in which multitudes of the best citizens do not consider the cause of the President as that of the Constitution. If an attempt is made to depose him upon mere partisan grounds, they will conclude that the supremacy of the Constitution may as well be vindicated, once for all, and will accept the risks and perils of maintaining it.

The want of any solid grounds of impeachment must not blind the country to the intentions of the Radicals. We cannot truly estimate their purposes unless we consider the fervor of their fanaticism, and place ourselves in their point of view. It is characteristic of the party to stick at no technical objections. A strict respect for the Constitution would have prevented their insisting on the emancipation proclamation; would have prevented their arbitrary imprisonments; would have prevented the exclusion of the Southern States from Congress. The Constitution weighs nothing against their head-strong pretence of right. In their own estimation, they are like Portia in the "Merchant of Venice," ready, for the sake of doing a great right, to do a little wrong. This being their habitual tone of sentiment, it is not safe to ignore it in judging of their designs.

How, then, does the political situation appear to the Radicals? In their view, President JOHNSON has betrayed them. They regard him with the fierce detestation felt by zealots for a renegade. We are not enquiring whether their view is right, but what it is. They can see nothing but the facts that Mr. JOHNSON was elected by their votes, and that he is the sole obstacle to the success of their policy. Their heavy party majorities and their possession of all the Northern State governments are rendered worthless and barren by his desertion. It is in the nature of the human mind that they should strain the Constitution against him. What they deem his treachery is aggravated, in their estimation, by the grandeur of the objects which they aim to accomplish. As they view it, they are engaged in a great mission of philanthropy. They are fulfilling a pledge to the negroes which binds the national honor. They are consummating the work of the war; they are reconstructing our institutions in harmony with their fundamental principle. They regard themselves as placed in one of those great epochs, when the inerests of the human race must prevail over the rigidity of fixed institutions, and they are determined to complete a great reform which they regard as the logical consequence of the war. As they do not permit the Constitution to be an obstacle, how can it be expected that they will be tender of the rights of one man; of a man whom they regard as faithless to a trust they reposed in him, as a renegade from their party, who uses a place which they conferred upon him to frustrate their wishes and defeat their policy? As they view it, here is one man defeating, by his treachery and obstinacy, the will of a whole people duly declared through the elections. They fancy that they are vindicating not only the claims of philanthropy, but the inherent right of the majority to govern. When fierce, vindictive passions take on these specious disguises, it is preposterous to suppose they will be held in check by constitutional restraints. If party discipline is potent enough to preserve party unity, it is certain that President JOHNSON will be impeached. The Radicals are enraged to find themselves, in spite of their majorities, as powerless as if they had lost the elections. They suppose that, by impeaching the President, they can break their fetters without violating the forms of the Constitution. Congress is the sole judge of the efficiency of the evidence, and its decision is subject to no review.

The evening papers contained this telegram:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.

It is understood to-day that the plan agreed upon by the leaders in the impeachment movement is to suspend the President as soon as the articles are preferred, Mr. Wade stepping into his (the President's) position. It is then proposed to prolong the trial until Mr. Johnson's regular term of office shall have expired, and in the meanwhile the South is to be reconstructed over again.

This is adroit enough to be probable. A prompt conclusion of the trial would subject the party to the risks and inconvenience of a new Presidential election. But if the proceedings can be protracted into the edge of October, the law does not require an election in advance of the regular one next year. The preliminary investigation will be spun out till the 4th of March, when the new Congress meets, partly as a device for running the trial past the beginning of October, and partly to accomplish important incidental objects. If the President is suspended, it is deemed necessary to have as few of his appointees in office at the time as possible. By the Constitution, his unconfirmed appointments hold good until the 4th of March, when the officers will go out without a removal. The others being Mr. LINCOLN's appointees, are thought likely to side with Congress, so that if the President resists suspension, he will have no agents through which he can administer the government. Mr. WADE, when declared President, will immediately fill the vacancies, and the whole administrative force of the government will obey his orders. President JOHNSON, having no control of the administrative machinery, will be powerless. His chief Secretaries may be disposed to obey him, but nobody will obey them. Congress will pass a law, stopping the pay of all military as well as civil officers who do not adhere to the new President. The control of Congress over the treasury is unquestionable. There are Radicals enough in the Cabinet officers refused to give up the department buildings and records, ways enough could be found to dispose of seven unprotected men. They might, for example, be summoned to testify before some Committee of Congress, and their offices taken possession of it they came or themselves imprisoned for conempt if they refused. With Mr. WADE recognized by Congress, and obeyed by the whole civil service, the odium of beginning a collision would be thrown upon President Johnson, and it is in order to gain this advantage that Congress will take care of the others before they begin the impeachment.

We have placed ourselves in the stand-point of the Radicals and stated what we suppose to be their view, as a means of rebutting the incredulity of fair-minded men, whose keen sense of the absurdity of an impeachment leads them to regard it as impracticable. The absence or insufficiency of evidence goes for nothing, if the court which is to judge of it are predetermined to convict. All the most powerful motives which can operate on heated partisans, compel them to impeach the President. Nothing can restrain them but vigorous and overwhelming popular demonstrations. They care nothing for the faint protests which have been made. Tame remonstrances gives them courage, by leading them to think they will encounter no resolute opposition.

FERTILIZERS FOR SPRING CROPS.

WE beg to inform the trade and planters of North Carolina and Virginia, that we are prepared to furnish them with the most approved FERTILIZERS, on the most accommodating terms. We will have a stock of genuine PERUVIAN GUANO, purchased direct from the Agent of the Peruvian Government.

We have now in store, for immediate delivery, 325 tons BRADLEY'S SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME, which won for itself such an enviable reputation in the Cotton and Tobacco counties of North Carolina and Virginia, last season, proving itself equal, and in many important respects, superior to the Peruvian Guano. We give an analysis of it as ascertained by Dr. Hayes, one of the most eminent Chemists in the country:

Results of Analyses Made of Bradley's Patent Super-Phosphate of Lime, as now sold by Wm. L. Bradley.

100 PARTS CONSIST OF

Moisture	5.30
Prepared animal matter, salts of Ammonia, fatty substances and Humus	38.50
Bone Phosphates of Lime, Magnesia and Iron (Soluble Phosphates of do. 16 6-10.)	36.80
Sulphate of Lime	16.50
Salts	20
Insoluble	2.60
	99.90

The animal matter afforded 4 2-10 parts of Ammonia when it was decomposed, and, as will be seen, nearly one-half of the Bone Phosphate is soluble.

After many analyses of your Super-Phosphate of Lime, made during the last few months, I have found your standard of quality full equal to that of any you have ever sold in former years; and I am satisfied that you include the correct principles in the manufacture. Respectfully,

A. A. HAYES, M. D., State Assayer.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, PITT COUNTY. COURT OF EQUITY.

Geo. W. Wooten and others vs. Heirs at Law of B. F. Wooten, dec'd. | Petition for sale of Land for partition, filed December 28th, 1867.

In this cause, it appearing that Needham Ward, Pleasant Bowden and wife Louisa, the children of Samuel McKenzie and his deceased wife Mary Ward, the children of —— Gillespie and his deceased wife Mary Jones, the children of —— Ross and his dec'd wife Sallie Jones, the children of Josiah Jones, dec'd, the said Mary Gillespie, Sallie Ross and Josiah Jones, being the children of Ella Jones, dec'd., defendants, are non residents of this State, it is therefore ordered that publication be made, for six weeks, in the Raleigh Sentinel, notifying said defendants to appear at the next term of said Court to be held at the Court House in Greenville, on the first Monday of March next, and plead, answer or demur, or said petition will be taken pro confesso and heard accordingly.

Witness LOUIS HILLIARD, Clerk and Master of said Court, at office in Greenville, this the 7th day of January, 1867.

THE SENTINEL.

Monday Evening, Jan. 21, 1867.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—See Card of Messrs. Jno. G. Williams & Co., Brokers.

New Music, by Oliver Ditson & Co., Musical Publishers, Boston.

Fertilizers for Spring Crops: See the announcement of McIlwaine & Co., Petersburg, Va. They wish to dispose of a large quantity of Bradley's Super-Phospate of Lime to our North Carolina farmers, which they will do on accommodating terms. An agent will visit many of our counties during the approaching Courts. No firm is better or more favorably known in North Carolina than that of McIlwaine & Co.

L. E. Heartt, agent, and one of our best merchants, is selling off at cost in order to make room for the Spring Stock.

Thos. J. Mitchell, Esq., of Newbern, will sell at public auction in Graham, on the 5th. of March, that valuable property known as the Company Mills. For particulars, see advertisement. This is a splendid opportunity for investment by men of capital and enterprise.

Mr. Albert, Mebaneville, offers $25 reward for a horse and mule, stolen on the night of the 19th instant.

B. P. Williamson & Co. will have a great Trade Sale on the 25th inst. See advertisement.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION.—The election to-day excites very great interest. We judge the number of votes polled will be large. Everything was going on quietly when we went to press, but the votes had not all been counted out.

P. S. We have just learned that Messrs. Richard H. Battle, A. N. McKimmon and B. F. Cheatham are elected in the middle ward.

SUPREME COURT.—M. H. Pinnix, Esq., of Davidson, was admitted to the practice of the law in the County Courts, in the large class the other day.

THE LEGISLATURE re-assembles to-morrow. Several members are already in the City.

SEE first and fourth pages.

RALEIGH.—Persons visiting Raleigh express surprise at the appearance of thrift and enterprise that prevails. This impression is owing to the contrast which our streets and stores present to their appearance during the war, when business was stagnant and shelves empty. It is, however, a well-warranted impression, for while there is, in certain cases, more of suffering and destitution in our midst, perhaps, than at any former period, still industry and enterprise are doing much to retrieve our fortunes and build up our city. These things indicate what Raleigh might become, as an entrepot of trade, if our national troubles were composed and our people felt secure as to the fruits of their investments and labor. Accessible, by railroads, to nearly every portion of the State, a fine wholesale trade might be, and ought to be, established here. Messrs. Pulliam, Jones & Co., and B. P. Williamson & Co., in the line of Groceries, Agricultural Implements, &c., and Messrs. Williams & Haywood and P. F. Pescud, in the line of Drugs, Medicines, Paints, &c., have demonstrated what may be done in this department.—And it is the intention, we learn, of the Messrs. Tucker, as soon as they move into their elegant new store, to inaugurate the wholesale business in dry and fancy goods,—an example which, we hope, will be followed by others of our merchants. The Raleigh Manufacturing Company, when fully in operation under the enterprising management of Mr. Willard and others, will supply the State, we hope, with prints, ginghams, &c., manufactured here entire from raw material, affording employment to many operatives and bringing a considerable amount of money into circulation.

And while many remark, as we have said, upon the evidences of go-a-head-itiveness here, none visit our City who are not struck with its beauty,—especially as seen in the Spring and Summer. Taking a stand at one of the upper windows of the Capitol, on the South side, or in the Western portico, in the month of May, for example, and looking down Fayetteville or up Hillsboro Street, no one can fail to be impressed with the beautiful view presented. The wide streets, lined on either side with glorious shade-trees, whose wide-spreading limbs, frequently meeting, form an arch of foliage, are deservedly the subjects of much admiration.—The Capitol, the Baptist and Episcopal Churches, the two Asylums, and several private edifices, constitute our chief architectural attractions, from which, by the way, must be excluded "the Palace," (so-called and ridiculously misnomered,) which is a reproach to the State as an Executive mansion.

Taking it all together, we are rather proud of our goodly "City of Oaks," and look forward, with high hopes, to the time when, under more auspicious political skies, it shall grow in importance, population, wealth and influence.

CORRECTION.—Our compositor, in recording the sudden death of Mrs. Jed. H. Lindsay, of Greensboro, in our Saturday's issue, incorrectly printed Mr. instead of Mrs.

RAIL ROAD AND EXPRESS CO.—Since our article in reference to the difference between the Express Company and the N. C. Railroad appeared, on Saturday, we have learned that the difficulty had no connection with the charges of the Road. We are further glad to learn that the difficulty will be adjusted in a few days.

GEN. SEWELL, who has been appointed by Gen. Howard to investigate, on the part of the Bureau, the question of colored apprenticeships in this State, has arrived in this city, and has had an interview with Gov. Worth.

THE TRUSTEES of the University hold a meeting in the Executive office, on Saturday next, 26th instant.

ARRIVED.—The remainder of the colored regiment arrived here last night. The regiment, we understand, was enlisted in the Eastern part of the State. They will be paid off and disbanded in a short time.

THERE IS a Steam Candy manufactory in Charlotte. The City authorities have also just purchased a Steam Fire Engine. Charlotte is going ahead.

WE LEARN that a batallion of recruits, under the command of Mayor Hayden, destined to swell the ranks of the 8th. U. S. Infantry, on duty here, have arrived in the City.

NEW BOOK.—"The History of the late war between the States—tracing its origin, causes and results," by Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, late Vice-President of the Confederate States, is now in the press of the National Publishing Company, Richmond, and will soon be issued. The high attainments of Mr. Stephens will insure a readable book at least, and one which will doubtless have a large sale.

Charles O'Connor and Mr. Shea, counsel for Mr. Davis, are in Washington. They have had a conference with Greeley, who has had one with the President. It is rumored that Mr. Davis will soon be released on parole of bail.

In the House of Representatives the other day, Seward and Stevens were seen chattering together as friendly as,—as,—never mind what.—On another sofa sat Horace Greeley, John M. Botts, and A. J. Hamilton. "Angels and ministers of grace defend us!"

Only $1,000 has hitherto been collected towards the proposed monument to General J. E. B. Stuart.

Confederate General John S. Preston has returned from Europe to his home in Columbia, South Carolina.

Charles O'Conor, Esq., has been invited to deliver the address before the literary societies of General Lee's college next commencement.

A few days ago THADDEUS STEVENS asked the House for a weeks absence to enable him to go to PENNSYLVANIA to "look after certain matters." He has returned; and it is presumed that he has seen what he went to "look after," and that the look was a long way off.

Senator Nye has been re-elected from Nevada.

Minnesota has ratified the Constitutional Amendment.

Forney is making his peace with Cameron, by praising his late speech.

HOLLOW-HEARTED SENTIMENTALISM.—The following incident shows the difference between practical beneficence and maudlin sentimentalism:

Eugene Sue used to visit, almost daily, one of the most fashionable ladies of Paris, Madame de ——, and hold forth in her richly furnished boudoir on the condition of the poor.

"Do you ever relieve their distress?" asked Madame de ——, at the close of one of these harangues.

"To a trifling extent," answered Sue; "but though my gifts are always small, they are always cheerfully bestowed. I give one-fourth of my income in alms."

That afternoon, as he left the Cafe de Paris, where he had been eating a costly dinner, an apparently old woman, clad in rags, prayed for charity.

"Go away," was the stern reply.

"But I am starving—give me a single copper to purchase bread with."

"I will give you in charge to a police officer, if you thus annoy me."

"You will?" said the beggar; "and yet, Monsieur Eugene Sue, you are the man who writes about the misery of the poor—you are the workingman's champion—you are"—

"Who are you?" exclaimed Sue.

"Madame de——," was the reply, and the disguised lady left the novelist to his reflections.

THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, Proprietor.

A Tennessee Vendetta.

From the Louisville (Ky.) Journal.

A correspondent at Elizabethtown, Carter county, Tennessee, gives us the particulars of a terrible feud that has been raging for twenty years between two families of that county, and which was brought to an end by the bloody deaths of the sole surviving males of the warring tribes, in the streets of Elizabethtown, on the evening of the 5th. instant. The history of the affair, as detailed by our correspondent, is as follows:

In the fall of 1846 a family named Johnstone removed from the neighboring county of Wautauga, North Carolina, into Carter county, East Tennessee, and settled down in the neighborhood of another family named Rogers. Johnstone, who appeared to be an energetic, industrious man, immediately went to work at clearing up a little farm. In this labor he was assisted by two sons—both mere lads. While the three were engaged in erecting fencing about their patch of land, Rogers rode up to where they were at work, one day, and laid claim to a pile of rails, about a dozen in number. This claim Johnstone disputed, and finally, on Rogers applying to him the epithets of "liar" and "thief," the North Carolinian pulled him from his horse, and administered to him a severe chastisement with his fists. Roger went off, vowing vengeance, and in the course of an hour returned to the spot armed with a rifle, the contents of which he discharged into the body of Johnstone, producing fatal consequences. Rogers, who was a man of some wealth for those primitive times, and was possessed of considerable influence among his rough, unlettered neighbors, was acquitted of the charge of murder by an examining justice. This was the beginning of the terrible vendetta that has run through the years that followed, cutting down the males of the two families in the pride of their strength and manhood.

The two Johnstone lads vowed vengeance upon the murderer of their parent, and one of them, James, worked night and day with but one object in view—to accumulate the means to purchase a rifle. At length he became the owner of one, and one Sabbath morning, with his gun on his shoulder, he approached the house of Rogers. The latter was sitting upon his porch, and, as he saw young Johnstone approaching, probably divining his intention, arose hastily and started toward the rack where his own gun was suspended. But the avenger of blood was upon his path, and ere he could reach his weapon he fell upon the floor a corpse, his heart pierced by the bullet of his foe. Rogers left behind him a young wife and three children, one of whom was a boy. Among the rough backwoodsmen of Carter county young Johnstone's crime was looked upon with satisfaction, if not favor—the Indian law of retaliation being looked upon by them as the very cream of justice. Afterward Johnstone married, and as the years passed by he became surrounded by an interesting and numerous progeny.

The boy William Rogers, in the meantime, had almost reached manhood's estate, when one morning, without divulging his intention to his mother or sisters, he left the house with his father's rifle upon his shoulder, as if he were going out to hunt, and in less than an hour a grief-stricken mother and children were weeping over the corpse of a slain husband and father. Young Rogers, in his turn had become an avenger, and Thomas Johnstone fell beneath his hand.

In time the memories of these three murders died away, and those who were children then grew up to be men and women. William Rogers had taken to himself a wife, and become the head of a growing family. One morning he rode into Elizabethtown, and as he did not return that night—a circumstance that had never occurred before—his wife became very uneasy, and in the morning induced her brother to start to town in search of her missing husband.

About three miles from the house he came upon the body of his brother-in-law lying in the road, stiff and cold in death. His brain had been pierced by a rifle ball. Although his murderer was never discovered, yet the community quietly accepted the belief that Henry Johnstone, a son of Thomas, who was slain by Rogers, was the perpetrator of the deed. Some years afterwards, in a drunken moment, in Elizabethtown, this young man acknowledged he had slain Rogers, and gave as his reason that the latter had killed his father. Johnstone was a young man, and only a few months before the murder had been married to a young girl in the neighborhood.

Again the chart of time was unrolled, and at least ten years had been added to the past, when a young lad, a son of the murdered Rogers, engaged in an altercation in the yard of the court house at Elizabethtown with Johnstone, who was then a middle-aged man, and inflicted such wounds upon him with a knife that he died on the following morning.

Thus it went on for years, now a Johnstone falling by the hands of a Rogers, and then a Rogers falling beneath the avenging hand of a Johnstone, until the war intervened, and for a time, at least, the terrible feud appeared to have ended. The cessation of hostilities brought the survivors of the warring families back to Carter County. These survivors consisted of Randall Rogers and Robert Johnstone, both battle-scarred veterans, and both unmarried men. On the evening of the 5th instant these two men met in a grocery at Elizabethtown, and soon became engaged in an altercation. Bystanders interfered, and for an hour or two a collision was averted. They were separated by friends and taken off in opposite directions. This occurred about noon.

About 3 o'clock, as Rogers was going up street, he saw Johnstone coming down. As they neared each other, they drew their revolvers and commenced simultaneously firing upon each other, continuing to advance as they fired. Finally, and when about 4 feet distance from Jonstone, Rogers sunk to the pavement, and, as he lay, the last act of his life was to fire the last charge in his pistol into the abdomen of Johnstone, whose last bullet, fired at the same instant, penetrated his antagonist's brain, causing instant death. Johnstone reeled and fell across the body of his foe, and when bystanders rushed to where they lay, he, too, had passed beyond all reach of mortal aid. Almost at the same instant of time, their two blood guilty souls have gone to join the gory ghosts of their ancestors. Thus ended a fend that had existed for twenty years, in the course of which fourteen men have died violent deaths.

Shocking Brutality!

We learn that a freedman living near Ricesville, Va., had a quarrel with his wife about a month ago, when he deliberately took his little son, aged ten years, and chopped his head off with an axe! The body was then thrown in the woods as prey for wild beasts and the fowls of the air, and the diabolical deed kept secret, until a few days ago it was accidentally discovered. The head could not be found.

We record the incidents as narrated to us.—Danville (Va.) Times.
